The Circulation of The Bulletin

The Bulletin has the largest circulation of any paper in Eastern Connecticut and from three to four times larger than that of any in Norwich. It is delivered to over 4,000 of the 4,058 houses in Norwich and read by ninety-three per cent. of the people. In Windham it is delivered to over 900 houses, in Putnam and Danielson to over 1,100, and in all of these places it is considered the local daily.

Eastern Connecticut has forty-five towns, one hundred and thirty-five postoffice districts, and sixty rural free delivery routes.

The Bulletin is sold in every town and on all of the R. F. D. routes in Eastern Connecticut.

WAR TAXATION.

As must be expected, there is widespread interest throughout the country in the action which will be taken by congress in regard to the revenue bill now before it. In the house there was approved the bill calling for $1,800,000,000 in war taxes, whereby almost everything imaginable was included. The measure was drawn with the idea of getting the money. In some cases full consideration was given to the wisdom of the levy, but in others it was not. As has been demonstrated by the protest which have been presented by those affected, showing as they did the injustice of the plan which would require certain of those to be taxed to pay more under the provisions of the act than they actually received as profit in a year.

The faults in the measure are being brought to light in the senate, where it is even claimed that the country does not need as much revenue as the bill which came to it from the house would provide. The senate is endeavoring to get the revenue bill's provisions on a basis where they will be equitable for all. There is no need for the imposition of oppressive taxes. Such in fact is the case, and even though according to the house bill such would result in actual operation.

Thus while it may seem that the senate is taking a course to that of the house, it must be appreciated that it is endeavoring to deal with the matter justly. It is important that a certain amount of the expense of the war should be raised each year. The people of today are willing and anxious to do their part and they of course look for fair treatment and wise distribution in the assessment. That of course is something which should prevail at all times but particularly now when the burden is heavier.

DRIVING SPAIN TO WAR.

Possibly the Spanish are so constituted that they can continue to accept the sinking of their ships by German submarines and do nothing more than enter protests and make demands for reparation, but such will be a surprising revelation if it is true. Yet such is the impression that Spain will be creating in the minds of other nations if it continues to hold to its policy of neutrality after the gross abuse of its rights and repeated disregard for the promises which have been made to it.

A number of Spanish ships have been sunk by the underwater boats without warning and without justification. Spain has protested, but despite the apparently friendly attitude of Germany and its proclaimed desire to maintain amicable relations with Spain, the Spanish ships continue to go down. It was only recently that a change was made in the cabinet, because the old cabinet was desirous of breaking with Germany. The new one was selected for the purpose of maintaining neutrality, but with the continued determination of Germany to sink all ships, whether belligerent or neutral, the members thereof must have come to the realization that they have no easy task.

After all that has been said and done by the Spanish government, the people of that country are now confronted with the sinking of the steamer C. de Elzaguera with the loss of 133 lives, accompanied by the announcement that the Regona had also been sent to the bottom. This of course can only be looked upon as adding insult to injury. It is quite plain that Germany does not intend to pay any attention to Spain's protest and it remains to be seen whether that country is going to accept it passively or show its resentment by taking steps to protect its rights, the lives of its people and its shipping. Germany is taking no steps to prevent such a move.

HELPING THE TRANSPORTATION PROBLEM.

When the announcement is made by the Boston and Maine railroad that there will be nearly 400 passenger trains disappearing in the summer of 1917, it is delivered to over 4,000 of the 4,058 houses in Norwich and read by ninety-three per cent. of the people. In Windham it is delivered to over 900 houses, in Putnam and Danielson to over 1,100, and in all of these places it is considered the local daily.

It is important that the various sections of the country should receive the proper supply of coal. Such cannot be done if the rolling stock is being utilized for other purposes and if it is not received there is a serious handicap placed upon the manufacturing establishments as well as the individual.

It is important also that every endeavor should be made to see that there is adequate distribution of foodstuffs. Everything suffers if that does not flow in steady volume sufficient to meet the requirements.

And it is equally important that there should be the proper facilities for the transportation of material, for turning out war orders, for the conveying of finished product from one section to another which is required in adding the necessary equipment to the army and navy while there must also be proper attention devoted to the transportation of troops and the immediate supplies which they require.

It is necessary that the hard pressed to meet all the requirements. It is necessary that there should be full cooperation. Freight congestion makes it necessary to curtail the passenger service and the Boston and Maine will not be the only road which will have to cut off some of such trains. A change in that service will cause some little protest but it can be more easily met than the problems which go with a freight tie-up.

THE ITALIAN COMMISSION.

The same sort of a welcome is being extended to the visiting Italian commission that was accorded to those of France and Great Britain. Headed by the prince of Udine, these representatives of Italy, the third commission of its kind to reach this country since the United States declared itself in a state of war with Germany, are here for the purpose of discussing the various phases of war cooperation with the leaders in this country.

It has been shown that this country can do much in the way of assisting the entente powers. It can not only aid materially in providing funds for carrying on the conflict, but can furnish engineers, send its army and navy to help and keep up the steady flow of supplies which are needed in the way of foodstuffs and equipment. Italy is of course in as much need of such things, barring possibly the army and navy, as are the other nations. This country will therefore be asked to furnish the commission to consider its requirements and, as in the case of the others, there is every reason to believe that it will not appeal in vain.

The commission brings evidence of the cordial relations which are existing between the nations, which are assurance not only for the present but for the future, and at no time could Italy set forth its needs, or point out that the part that is playing, with better results than right now while it is in the midst of the big drive for the capture of Trieste.

The commissioners of course bring the pledge of loyalty on the part of Italy in the common cause and as the result of their coming there will be a better understanding between the nations as to their plans and policies.

WHEN THEY VARNISHED

"I'm going to patent a house," began the Hyde Park man, addressing his friend from Woodlawn, as they grabbed the last of the seats in the smoking car. "It's going to be the kind of house with a roof on a hinge, and all the floors on hinges, and when it is time to clean house all you'll have to do will be to raise the roof and fold it back, then turn on a hose and sort of wash the place out. The water running away through basement drains. Let the wild, sweet air of heaven dry it. That would make me saved his mortals!"

"I take it that you have not been treated well lately," observed the man from Woodlawn. "Did somebody get wallpaper paste on your hat?"

"Huh!" said the Hyde Park man. "Give a soul above trifles! I don't object to much of anything short of being varnished in! Or out! Every time we house clean I give you my word, I expect nightly when I come home to find my bed made up on the top of the roof, the bath-tub, and for a plate of sandwiches and bottle of milk beside it! There simply is no telling what Imogene will do to me when she has only one answer to complaints and that is, 'But the workman said they had to do it!'"

"I have grown accustomed to the workman's council of the crowned heads of Europe and by firmly announcing that the calculators and varnishers simply had to do it she could completely demoralize them and then hobnobbing subjectly at her feet!"

"I have grown accustomed through the years to being separated from my clear jar by ten feet of varnish, and I know that is to sit gazing at a pile of new magazines first, and then a lot of other experiences."

"But always there remain on earth new fields to explore," I found yesterday. When I left in the morning I took my rifle by the hand and looked at her firmly in the eye. "Remember, Imogene, I told her, 'that we are to be varnished out of our bed-room and the bath-tub, and for heaven's sake remember to get out all the things that we'll need. Recollect that the clear dollar is to sit gazing at a pile of new magazines first, and then a lot of other experiences.'"

"I did the deed, breaking only two electric light globes in the Perkins house with my plank. All the while, I kept my finger on the trigger and anxiously downstairs, was shrieking for me to remember and stand on the plank. I did not know that the varnish was more than absolutely necessary. Did you ever try to spring lightly from a stance on one foot to the end of a plank four feet away, meanwhile carrying a shirt, some ties, a pair of trousers and other trifles? Others have done it, but I think I live for. And then Imogene said it was my fault because we were late for the party. I was so late, we had a good time! It was worth billing my glad clothes carefully on to a carmine pig as I did when we got home, thinking to keep them from harm's way!"

"Then what are you kicking about?" demanded the Woodlawn lady. "Some people never are satisfied!"—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

National Rehabilitation.

Mr. Editor: I am writing about liquor advertisements noted with gratification. Certainly all your subscribers believe that The Bulletin is a newspaper which is for you are quite right in intimating that the newspapers can get along very well without liquor advertisements.

But do you not think it an opportunity for The Bulletin to declare for national prohibition in doing so? Has it not been beyond question, in the experience of men, that the use of alcohol in a drink of any considerable extent without damage to his entire being? Is it not true that you cannot find a single place, whether high-toned saloon or low dive, even hotel or club, where alcohol is dispensed which does not do far more harm than good? Can The Bulletin answer these questions in any other way than to say "Yes?"

And if "Yes," how can the alcoholic drink traffic be upheld by any honest and sincere newspaper? Is not this traffic, because damaging to any and all who drink considerably, and because it is a source of danger to the entire welfare, which our government proclaims as its first concern—is not this traffic a disgrace to un-American citizenship, with absolutely no proper legal or constitutional standing under the American flag, when once the issue is really joined?

I would respectfully ask The Bulletin to consider these questions.

Sincerely,
ALLEN B. LINCOLN.
New Haven, Conn., May 25, 1917.

Syria and Armenia Need Relief.

Mr. Editor: Thousands of women and children are starving and relief work seriously hampered by persistent drought and absolute erroneous press report stating that "since the severance of diplomatic relations between the United States and Turkey, large amounts of money contributed in this country for the relief of destitute Syrians and Armenians have remained in the treasuries of the societies raising the funds, because there was no medium through which to transmit them."

The statement is doubtless well intentioned, but it is absolutely false and liable to do great harm to the hundreds of thousands of destitute people, many of whom are starving and to whom the American committee for Armenian and Syrian relief is sending without hindrance every dollar of money that can be secured.

This American committee for Armenian and Syrian relief is the only committee ministering general relief in this area. They have at no time, either before or since the severance of diplomatic relations, had the slightest difficulty in transmitting funds or in administering them through responsible consultants, ex-consuls, American missionaries and other reliable agents, more than 100 of whom are at this moment serving in relief administration without one cent of expense for salary or compensation for relief funds.

From having money "remain in the treasuries of the societies raising funds," the treasury is at this moment overflowing with money. The simple reason that the committee could not have the heart to turn a deaf ear to the repeated cables begging for food with which to feed the starving.

As to the possibility of getting funds into the Turkish empire, there are three absolutely distinct and safe channels open to the committee, through any one of which they can transmit any amount of money to responsible administrators in the needy sections of the empire where destitute refugees are gathered and the proper principal asset which he can store for next year's needs is the experience which will enable him to get constantly better results. More concretely, he can start now making a compost bed for next year's use.

Compost is one of the "miraculous" forms in which fertilizer can be applied to the soil. It can be used profitably in nature, and in the seed boxes which will be used for starting plants indoors near the

"Where," I asked sternly, "are my things?" She waved a hand at the bookcase and I investigated the articles drawn out for me. There were evening coat and my silk vest, my silk socks and dress studs, patent leather shoes and handkerchiefs. Seating myself carefully on a pile of books I breathed hard. I told Imogene that I appreciated immensely her thoughtfulness but that custom required one to wear trousers with his dress suit and those of Scotch mixture which had on really would cause comment if I wore them. Also, I needed a tie. If I wore without a tie he attracted attention, but most of all I must have a dress suit. That I insisted on, no matter what other makeshifts I endured.

Imogene was hopping mad. She acted as if she herself was the injured party. She said that if I were as tired as she was, what with house cleaning all day, I wouldn't try to be funny—and for Imogene's sake, do something, because the Goodriches were important and we mustn't be late! And I a mile from the village haberdashery had leaped upon Imogene's suggested lingerie ribbon for a tie, and had hysterics at my hopeful suggestion of using a dinner napkin for a shirt front. No, sir!

"So I had to go next door, to the Perkins house, where I gave my word and bow and say 'Good evening,' pleasantly, like a book agent, and ask whether I might run a plank from one of their bedrooms to the bedroom window from whence I could leap into my closet, and if I did not stick entirely to the floor, leap back again, with my plunder."

"Looking about as pleasant as a gorilla eating a peach," Imogene said, "oh, certainly, if I would excuse the room because she had had a dressmaker all day, nothing makes a woman madder than having to show her room in which she's been sewing for twenty-four hours."

A Norwich Citizen Gives Information of Priceless Value.

When you suffer from backache, Headaches, dizziness, nervousness, Feel weak, languid, depressed, Have annoying urinary disorders; Do you know what to do? Some Norwich people do. Read the statement that follows. It's from a Norwich citizen. Testimony that can be investigated.

Mrs. A. D. Lathrop, 3 Stanton Ave., Norwich, says: "I am recommending Doan's Kidney Pills because I used several other medicines for attacks of backache and found none as good as Doan's. They give great relief always strengthening my back. I recommend Doan's Kidney Pills because I think they will help others."

end of next winter. It is also valuable for use in hills of melons or other vegetables which need warm soil in the spring and for top dressings of garden beds where quick action of fertilizer is desired.

Compost consists of fine, thoroughly rotted manure, vegetable matter, and soil mixed together. As soon as you start to gather any garden crops you can begin composting the waste portions. The pea vines, the turnip tops, and other garden refuse, if thrown into the compost bed, in the city lawn clippings are especially desirable in the compost bed. Street sweepings, you are sure they are free from automobile oil—will help greatly to increase the fertility of the compost.

It will pay the permanent gardener to build a permanent pit for compost, lining it with concrete.

THE WAR PRIMER

By National Geographic Society.

Men—"Now of the deportation of the whole civil population of the Belgian city of Menin by the Germans brings into the focus of world interest a community which is strangely little known in this country. The world war," says a war geography bulletin issued by the National Geographic Society.

It is barely possible that had there been no Menin there might have been no world war, for it was at the siege of this city in 1914 that the German army officer, Scharnhorst, won his first military paper on the escape of a military paper on the escape of the Menin garrison and this brought him to the attention of staff officers of various German armies and he was offered several commissions. He accepted service under the king of Prussia and from this time dates the beginning of the Prussian military system, which was the genesis of the holocaust of nations. It was Scharnhorst, the hero of Menin, who induced his Jewish people to aid the Prussian professional long-service army which had been shattered at the battle of Marston, whose 10,000 inhabitants were very proud of the Church of Medardus, founded at the beginning of the 13th century and rebuilt in 1333-1342. It had been rebuilt just before the outbreak of the war.

Menin is, or was, a prosperous little town of 20,000 inhabitants engaged in the manufacture of lace, cotton goods, and tobacco. It nestles on the banks of the River Lys which here forms the border between France and Belgium for a few miles. "Less than seven miles to the northwest of Menin is Courtrai, scene of the famous battle of the Spurs in 1302. To the southwest, three and a half miles by rail, is the tobacco-manufacturing town of Ypres, whose 10,000 inhabitants are very proud of the Church of Medardus, founded at the beginning of the 13th century and rebuilt in 1333-1342. It had been rebuilt just before the outbreak of the war."

French soldiers ran from Menin to Roulers, 11 miles to the north, and to Roubaix, a mile or two nearer, in a southeasterly direction. Ypres is 15 miles by rail to the northwest, 11 miles to the south, a distance of 10 miles in an air line."

The Pope has sent $300 for the assistance of victims of the war in Lithuania.

HOME GARDENS

Compost. "Let me suggest that every one who creates or cultivates a garden helps, and greatly, to solve the problem of the feeding of the nations."—President Wilson.

The Government itself is making preparations for a war that will last at least another year. The home gardener who is aiding his country by producing his own food need not do less; says today's bulletin from the National Emergency Food Administration. In gardening this year the worker should continually be gathering and storing the principal asset which he can store for next year's needs is the experience which will enable him to get constantly better results. More concretely, he can start now making a compost bed for next year's use.

OTHER VIEW POINTS

As a result of the Massachusetts supreme court decision, dismissing the $100,000,000 suit against certain directors of the New York, New Haven and Hartford road issued in 1914, tying up the shares of stock owned by the individual respondents, they are now free to sell their stock. It is understood that owing to the inability of one of the former directors to trade his shares since the summer of 1914 he has lost a small fortune.—Hartford Times.

The New Haven Register says that the owners of the abandoned farms in Connecticut ought to come forward at once with the offer of them for public use under a reasonable arrangement. That "reasonable" arrangement is hard to obtain. One of our neighbors who let a farm of his out to a family to work for nothing, found when they had finished the season and departed that they had burned up all the fences for fire wood and had even taken boards off the barn and depleted the wood supply in other ways very materially. They also left most of the machinery, tools and utensils in dilapidated condition.—Waterbury American.

During the past Sabbath there were seven auto mishaps in the city of New Haven alone, which recalls again to our attention the necessity of strict enforcement of the city ordinance and the police regulations regarding auto traffic in this city. Our ordinances and police regulations have been regarded as more or less of a joke by some of our local, as well as out-of-town visitors who drive automobiles and it is time the tables should be turned and sharply on those who have considered them as such. This year there are more autos in use in the state of Connecticut than ever before and consequently there are more amateurs or amateur drivers who are the cause of accidents have been greatly increased. Before there is any further mishap to mar the record of our city some of our reckless auto drivers should be brought into the local police court and given an opportunity to complete their education in the Police Academy.—Rockville Journal.

Thousands of men in Connecticut today who are at least the equals of Judge Tuttle in ability, education, intelligence, character and citizenship receive not more than one-eighth the salary he has annually drawn from the state for some years. Furthermore, those men are required to give a full working day of their time and strength and mind for three hundred days in the year, without the privilege of adding to income by other activities, while the judge receives the state for some years more than one hundred days of the year and each of those days is shorter than the union labor one. Also he is permitted to drive revenue from the practice of his profession. Compared with the thousand dollars a year for close application that so many of the equals of a Superior court judge receive the salary and the favors and the advantages of the position are exceedingly generous. Judge Tuttle does not do himself credit by suggesting otherwise. One of the conspicuous things of the recent legislative session was that of legal greed. About every lawyer who had any possible claim on a public salary was out for an increase, regardless of what happened to the people who pay the bills. If there are others of the same temper on the bench they can render a distinct service by resigning.—Bristol Press.
